Introduction

The German Federal Republic is a constitutional state. It means that every person living in Germany, must follow the law and rules of the German constitution. The legal system is complex and sometimes difficult to understand. But every law and legal regulation can be read up. Alternatively you can take legal advice.

An appeal against every court decision is possible. The decision then will be verified. But this can also cause higher costs.

This handout explains, what it means to be on probation.

What does probation mean?

You have committed a crime and were sentenced (judgment) to a prison sentence. But you don't have to go to prison, if you fulfill the requirements and rules (conditions and instructions) that court will determine for a certain time (period of probation).

These conditions and instructions are written in your probation order, which you will get from court.

The remission of punishment can be achieved, if you fulfill the requirements. In this case you don't have to go to prison and your sentence is declared settled.

If you don't follow the rules or commit another crime, your period of probation can for example be extended or be revoked. In this case you have to go to prison.

What is demanded from you?

- Court expects you to take your chance seriously and don't commit other crimes.
- During your period of probation , court always has to know where you live, so always communicate your address
- You have to fulfill the conditions and instructions. This also means that you have to meet regularly with your probation officer

What is the probation officers task?

A probation officer works on behalf of the court.

The probation officer is at your disposal to help and supervise you. The probation officers objective is to help you manage your period of probation. Please contact your probation officer if you have any difficulties.

Especially if there is a problem with the fulfillment of your conditions and instructions, so a solution can be found.

The probation officer also checks, if you fulfill the conditions and instructions and reports to the judge/ court. If you commit another crime there is an obligation to report to the court.

The decisions within your period of probation, are made by the court, not by the probation officer.

Only the court will get personal information about you from the probation officer. Talking to other institutions, requires your permission (professional discretion). This can be helpful to solve problems.
